

Methods have been developed for the determination of Be down to femtogram levels in environmental samples. These methods have been adequately validated and are in practice for the analysis of water samples.